

Studio

The Studio Museum in Harlem Magazine / Summer 2009

Islands of New York

We invited artist Accra Shepp to come to Harlem as he investigates the more than thirty islands that comprise New York City. Many of these islands are often invisible to casual observers—especially people who live and work here. Shepp reveals the nature of this maritime city through the cohabitation of its manmade architecture and its natural state as a collection of islands.

A photography commission by Accra Shepp

